Lord, forgive us when we think and act with duplicity. We know that salt and fresh water do not come from the same spring, and we cannot be partakers in Your table and the table of demons at the same time. We cannot serve two masters – we will only end up loving one and despising the other. We know that the flesh is weak, and the spirit is willing, yet too often we do not recognize our double standards and double minded living. Help us to let our yes be yes and our no be no, as all else is from the evil one. Please make our divided hearts and minds whole. Forgive us for our excuses and for when we honor You with our lips but have our hearts far from You. May we say what we mean and mean what we say. Help us to confess our sin and not simply salve our consciences with words, but may we act in truth and deed. May our confession be coupled with remorse, repentance, and return to You. Help us eradicate the Baals in our lives and choose this day to serve You alone. Help us not to worship shallowly, in emotive experience only, but deeply from the heart in humility and gratefulness without pretense, without taking advantage of You and Your grace. Thank You, O Lord for Your mercy and compassion. Thank You for giving us all power unto godliness so that we can live a life worthy of Your calling. In Jesus Name and for Your Name's sake we ask, Amen.
